Department:	Department of Health Sciences of Women, Children and Public Health
Current position:	Subspecialty Fellow Gynecologic Oncology

It is a great honor for me to apply for the ENYGO Italian National Representative.

I attended the Gynecologic Oncology Department of Gemelli Hospital in Rome since 2009 when I was a medical student, and I concluded my residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology of five years at Catholic University of Sacred Heart in Rome (Italy). This was a great chance to actively participate in clinical patients' management (surgery and chemotherapy treatment) and collaborate in different oncological research projects. Moreover, I had the possibility to improve my teamwork ability and to build actual authentic relationships in one of the largest referral centers for Gynecologic Oncology in Italy and in Europe.

I also spent two months fellowship at the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center in New York, where I had the possibility to develop my oncological knowledge further. during that period, I had the opportunity to extend new international friendships and connections. Furthermore, I spent two additional months at Charité Hospital (Berlin), where I conducted a clinical research.

At the moment, I cover the position of subspecialty fellow in Gynecologic Oncology at Gemelli Hospital (Italy), improving my oncological formation and surgical skills.

In this shocking COVID era where the network, the social events, and the possibility of sharing experiences with colleagues were strongly affected, it is my primary objective to increase Italian Network of young Gynecologic Oncologists, by promoting surgical courses and increasing the possibility of clinical experience in the referral Gynecologic Oncology centers in the country.

This ENYGO application is supported by my great passion for Gynecologic Oncology. It represents an opportunity to participate in ESGO accreditation site visits across Europe and share Gynecologic Oncology knowledge with our European Community.
